Appendix 1 to the Terms of Reference

CONTRACT SUBJECT MATTER

The subject of the procurement is: are original spares and packages of consumables for the ion microprobe SHRIMP requiring constant renewal as a result of regular work microprobe, that is under warranty.

There are

1. ETP multiplier (1 item)
2. Kohler aperture bar (15 aperture) 1 set
3. IFLEX electrometer (charge mode)
4. Counting system upgrade for IFLEX (1 item)
5. Low Field Tesla Tamer (1 item)
6. Duoplasmatron back (1 item)
7. Electron gun with ceramic mount (with power supply) (1 item)
8. Ion Source Cs⁺ (no power supply) (1 item)

All of these items have to be compatible with the SHRIMP IIE/MC ion microprobe installed in PGI-NRI

1) Purpose

Ordered spares and packages of consumables are interchangeable parts and packages for various and specific purposes, but generally they allow the continuous and most efficient operation of the SHRIMP IIe/MC ion microprobe.

2) Product description- description of the spares their main functions

1. ETP multiplier

Electron Multiplier - High Rate

The high rate Electron Multiplier is an 21 stage, line-of-sight first dynode, Multiplier with a nominal gain of 10^7 at 2.0 kV energizing voltage. This high voltage is a negative potential supplied by a uni-polar 5 kV high voltage power supply with a maximum output of 3.6 kV. The Electron Multiplier is operated in pulse counting mode by providing a pulse current signal for each secondary ion arrival. The amplified pulse current signal passes through a Pulse Height Discriminator before entering the high speed IPCS counting system. Electron multiplier used when measuring small ion count rates (< 200 kHz) in multiple collector mode.

2. Köhler Apertures

Several replaceable apertures are mounted in the Köhler Aperture Bar, which is manually driven by a 25 mm Digital Linear Feed through. The aperture diameters as initially supplied are 0.20, 0.12, 0.12, 0.12, 0.07, and 0.03 mm respectively, mounted in the Aperture Bar 3.0 mm apart. An ion image of the selected Köhler Aperture is focused onto the target for analysis, so the size of the Aperture determines the size of the area on the sample surface (de-magnification about 7:1) impacted by the primary ion beam. The Köhler Apertures are made of Tantalum to resist erosion by the primary beam. Periodic replacement of apertures is necessary, depending on the brightness of the ion source and amount of instrument use.

3. IFLEX electrometer (charge mode)

The novel iFlex electrometer iFlex allows the Faraday cup-electrometer combination to be used on much lower signals than a conventional high gain electrometer, thereby overcoming the ‘megaHertz gap’ between signals too high for an electron multiplier (> 100 kHz) and too low for a conventional electrometer (< 1 MHz). The SHRIMP multicollectors, when teamed with the innovative iFlex capacitance mode electrometers, provide unrivalled performance for stable isotope measurement using Faraday cups, down to signal levels below 50 kHz.

4. Counting system upgrade for IFLEX -is an upgraded system for counting, which is -compatible with counting iFlex electrometers.

5. Low Field Tesla Tamer

The tesla tamer© Hall effect probes provide a magnetic field sensor signal to the Field Controller and are therefore a critical component of SHRIMP II operation. The four tesla tamer© units are equally distributed around the flight tube well within the magnetic field in order to produce an accurate average of the magnetic field strength over the entire area of the analyser magnet pole pieces. The temperature-regulated tesla tamer© units are designed to lie flat on the lower pole piece to ensure that the hall probe sensors remain mechanically stable and are perpendicular to the magnetic field. The optional low field tesla tamer© units are equipped with an internal amplifier to improve the stability of the feedback to the Field Controller at very low field levels.

6. Duoplasmatron back

The Duoplasmatron, is the source of primary ions. The Duoplasmatron is fed gas via a micrometer actuated leak valve. The feed gas is normally high purity oxygen, but may also be argon (when the Duoplasmatron is configured to produce positive ions) or an argon/oxygen mixture. The gas in the Duoplasmatron is ionized within a hollow cathode electrical discharge. Ions of the desired polarity are extracted from the resultant plasma. For extraction of negative ions the Duoplasmatron is fitted with an off-axis intermediate electrode. If positive ions are required, the intermediate electrode is exchanged for one with an axial aperture, and two of the three rings of permanent magnets normally fitted to the exterior of the Duoplasmatron are removed. The pressure of the oxygen gas feeding the Duoplasmatron is measured by an electrically isolated thermocouple vacuum gauge. The Duoplasmatron is cooled by a mains powered fan which, if disabled, will trip a safety interlock on the Duoplasmatron power Supply.

7. Electron gun with ceramic mount (with power supply)

The electron gun is used to prevent the build-up of positive charge on the sample surface when analyzing insulating minerals in negative secondary ion mode. Because the Gun is referenced to Column Ground, the electron energy (about 1.5 keV) must be sufficient to overcome the secondary extraction potential (about 750 V) and still be enough to neutralize the positive charge accumulating at the sample surface from the incoming Cs⁺ and outgoing negative secondary ions.

A Electron Gun model ELG-2 (2 keV) or equivalent is mounted to the secondary extraction housing using insulated mount to provide a charge neutralizing electron beam.

Because the Electron Gun must operate at Column Ground potential (about 10 kV), the power supply is electrically isolated from true ground within a purpose-built acrylic case, allowing it also to be floated at Column Ground potential.

8. Ion Source Cs⁺ (no power supply)

A alkali metal ion source IGS-4B (5 keV), here source fitted with a Cs firing unit, is normally used in place of the Duoplasmatron for generating positive primary ions. Cs⁺ is strongly electropositive, maximizing the yield of negative secondary ions. The Cs⁺ ion source is mounted on the end of the Primary Column in place of the Duoplasmatron and driven by an earth-referenced power supply (IGPS-4). Because the source is ground referenced, ions which are initially accelerated to the desired energy (usually 5 kV) are then further accelerated to approximately 14.25 kV by the 10 kV Column Ground extraction potential.

If Ordering Party's tender documents contain any provisions, which could indicate a certain product, manufacturer, country of origin, etc., it must be recognized, that it is permissible to submit solutions equivalent to the one described, but by the "equivalence" means that offered device will have:

- a) at least the same features, i.e. functional and useful features, as the ion micro probe described in the detailed description of the subject of the procurement in this SECP
- b) All contractors who submit equivalent bids, in accordance with the provisions of the Public Procurement Law Act, are obligated to prove in the contents of their bids, that the subjects of the procurement offered by them meets the requirements equivalence described above.
